FASTENERS CAPTURING INDUSTRIAL MARKET IN INDIA!

Fasteners are one of the most common elements used in mechanical machine construction and design, they hold everything together.

The Indian industrial fastener market can be segmented into high tensile fasteners and mild steel fastener. Growing automotive and auto ancillary sector, increasing infrastructure and construction activities, developing heavy engineering industry comprises some of the key factors propelling the industrial fastener market in India.

The market has huge opportunity with an increase in upcoming manufacturing activities in the defense and automotive sector. Indian industrial fastener market is poised to grow over the coming years along with the steady economic growth of the country.

North India – Projecting a Prosperous Fastener Industry

According to Freedonia Group, a globally renowned database, in 2018, worldwide demand for industrial fasteners is forecast to amount to US$93.8 billion. The outlook of fastener market prospects remains optimistic, mainly driven by the demand from automotive, construction, machinery, household appliances, aeronautic and space sectors; as well as by economic and industrial policies in emerging economies. In 2016, the Government of India undertook two major infrastructure projects, viz. “Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor” and “Smart Cities,” which have in turn give rise to the buoyant demand for fasteners.

The automotive industry is in dire need of industrial fasteners. New Delhi is currently implementing “Automotive Mission Plan 2016-2026 (AMP 2026),” which classifies India into four major industrial clusters. Northern region includes Metropolis, New Delhi and Gurgaon, Haryana.

The Taiwanese fastener companies looking to develop Indian market are recommended to take into account automotive clusters as their investment destination. It is easier to enter the supply chain if recognized by local foreign firms or Indian companies.
